[10 marks]

Recycling is a means of processing used things to be used again as new products. We recycle old paper bags, bottles and plastic bags to reduce their production. Besides that, in recycling, we use things like newspapers, aluminum cans and garden refuse to make new things.

With the advancement of technology, natural materials are becoming scarce. Therefore, human beings have resorted to recycling to avoid the raw materials from perishing. It is also important to reduce the amount of waste in the environment. It is sad to say in a day, human beings discard many things. Some of these things can be recycled. Therefore, when we reuse things, we throw away fewer items.

Landfills and dumpsites are places where rubbish is disposed. These landfills are limited, so we must learn to save space. In order to do so, we must recycle the things we use in our daily lives. We can recycle glass containers, aluminum cans, paper and shopping bags.

In recycling, we save energy. During a production process a lot of energy will be required to produce a new product. The by-products of these new products are toxic waste that can be harmful to mankind. Hence, through recycling, pollution can be reduced.

We recycle materials to save money. It is a cheaper method of waste disposal than landfills. We can also make creative handicrafts and gives from used items as decorations for the home and as presents to friends. Besides this, the recycled materials can be sold to gain some revenue for the family. Beautiful cards, gift wraps and decorative home items can be made from recycled materials thereby helping the cottage or home industries.
